Dedication

In grateful appreciation of His apostolic zeal and tireless efforts particularly in the cause of Catholic education, and of His personal interest and paternal solicitude for our alma mater, we affectionately and respectfully dedicate this volume to . . .

Most Rev. M. J. Lemieux, O. P.
Archbishop of Ottawa

Acting Dean's Message

College training is one of the best traditions of our Christian Western civilization. In the course of time we have developed various forms of schooling for young people and we have perfected techniques of rigid training for the professions, for bridge building and ballet as well as for law and medicine. But a liberal College education has its own special merit, more noble, as many think, than most others, for it strives to make men. Like a classical work of art, it mingles in ideal proportions something pleasurable with something practical, and indeed the more truly pleasurable it is, the more fully practical it will prove in teaching you how to live.

Your College years coincide with vital years in the development of human intellect and character. Faculty members are the spectators at the truly solemn drama that is the transformation of a human mind. They perceive first the mind of a shy, unoffending, awkward Freshman or Sophomore who blushes as he wears his first tie and who advances with faltering steps in the garden of knowledge and culture, unable as yet to tell herbs and flowers from thorns and weeds; and they see this finally transformed into the mind of an alert, efficient and dignified graduate, who wears his academic robes for the first time with the ease of youth, but who is now conscious of his responsibilities as a human being and his duties as a Christian.

For various reasons, it happens that only a small number of young men and young women can have the benefit of a College education. You are among the fortunate ones. During the years which you spend at College, your work and your behavior should always indicate that you are aware of the privilege you now enjoy and of the duties you will have to assume later in life. More will be expected of you because more has been given to you.

It has been said that great men make history. We should be able to say in turn that College graduates make their country and its civilization. You are privileged to be living in a young country with exceptional potentialities for growth, material and spiritual, economic and cultural. Its life is in the future and its history is yet to be written. Some might tell you that your hopes can be like those of young Athenians when Plato was stirring the minds of men and Phidias was creating the beauty of the Parthenon, or like those of young Florentines when Dante gave them his vision Del Paradiso and Cimabue painted the first Italian Madonnas and St. Francis brought to men the fire of the Holy Spirit. Yet it is perhaps more gladdening to the Christian heart to consider, with the Catholic poet Claudel, that our age marks the end of "a dark medieval period, as the poets of the Middle Ages may well have regarded Ancient times."

In the past centuries young men have met the great challenge and to them we owe the important civilizations of the world. The challenge is given to you in your own land today. Prepare yourselves now that in later life you may be builders of great things, like Pierre de Craon, the architect of the Sainte Justice of Reims, "who, with the knowledge imparted to him, constructed a stone framework to filter for men the oceans of Divine Light."

Graduates

A Message to the Graduates

In their graduating year college students are subject to many occupational hazards. One of the most serious of these is their exposure to messages of advice. During their under-graduate days the graduating students at St. Patrick's College have had much better advice than I could give them. I therefore will avoid advice.

However, a few days ago I was reading some essays on British political leaders written by Justin McCarthy. McCarthy was a journalist, and a member of the Parnell party in the British House of Commons in Victorian times. Even today it is rewarding to read McCarthy. Like so many men in British public life, he wrote reminiscences and sketches of people with whom he had associated during his parliamentary career. He wrote biographies, and he wrote a most readable "A History of Our Own Times". His day was the time of Britain's greatest world prestige and power. His writings reflected the influence of her political leaders upon their times. His was a day of material prosperity, of great affluence among certain classes, and of leisure.

For students who are graduating from a liberal arts college, it is interesting to examine the background and careers of these men. In Canada's expanding economy today we are told that we are short of personnel in the technical fields. We need engineers, doctors, scientists, and all manner of technically trained people if our progress is to match our promise. We hear relatively little of the need for the educated man, by which I mean the man in whom the faculty of judgment has been developed in the university, as Newman would have developed it.

Mr. Chesterton in one of his essays, said that "training youth to earn a living is not education at all . . . and the point of education is that it should give a man abstract and eternal values." He felt though that if a theorist will be called impractical, he will probably be indispensable. Most of the Victorians understood this, and the men in their public life reflected this conviction. I would not suggest that we follow the lead of the Victorians in all matters, but we can learn much from them.

Gladstone was an Oxonian, and a high churchman. He was a great prime minister, and a great party leader, but he always had time to compose books and pamphlets on religious topics and on academic matters, and to engage in controversies touching such matters. Disraeli was a writer whose name was made in the field of fiction. Arthur Balfour, another prime minister, could write "A Defence of Philosophic Doubt", which ranked high in the field of epistemology, as also did his "The Foundations of Belief". Lord Roseberry who succeeded Gladstone as party leader and prime minister, will perhaps be remembered best as an after-dinner speaker, and as a lecturer upon occasions commemorating the great poets, philosophers, and statesmen of his own and other countries. John Morley's writings compare with Macaulay's in their historic aspect, although perhaps they were more reliable, and with Burke's speeches in their appreciation of the historic significance of the parliamentary process. James Bryce, another parliamentarian, was one of the greatest constitutionalists Britain has produced. He was an historian, as well. His work on the American Constitution will forever remain a classic.

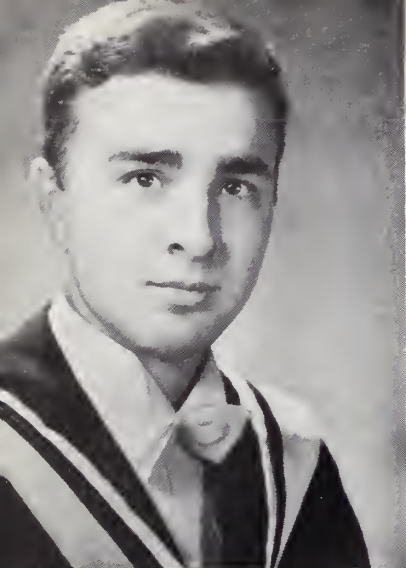

These are but a few of the people who formed public opinion in Victoria's day. They belong to a tradition which produced a Newman, an Acton, a Dickens, a Stevenson, and a Browning. They were bred in the academic atmosphere of the great English universities. They never lost the intellectual stamp which their university training impressed upon them.

You may say that the Bachelor's Degree from an arts college, is not a practical instrument for public, or professional, or scientific, or business life. You cannot say so if you remember the people who made Victorian England the golden age of parliament, and who influenced her great intellectual, commercial and industrial achievements in those days. In this reflection there may be a message to the graduates.

St. Pat's second year in intercollegiate football competition, under the direction of coach John Lynch, proved to be a winning one. In league competition the Irish won two, lost one, and tied one for a second place finish with seven of a possible ten points.

This year's squad was strengthened both by return of many of last year's players and by the arrival of a number of experienced players from the high school team. Royden Kealey at quarter, Bob Young and Tom Anderson at end, Brian Kealey, Gerry and Bob Morin on the line and Bubs Besserer in the backfield were among the newcomers.

Returning members of last year's squad included Kevin Enright, Bucky Kavanaugh, Bill Ryan, Dave Albert, Tom Ray and Charlie Wendell. The backfield was also bolstered by Larry Bradley and Moe Doucette.

The season opened with the traditional game against Royal Military College of Kingston. Memories of last year's shellacking at the hands of the soldiers still lingered in the minds of many, and as a result the Green and Gold ran up an avenging 37-9 score downing the cadets.

The next week St. Pat's had a bye and moved out of their league to challenge St. Anthony's, the power of the Ottawa Junior Football League. In this contest the team gained valuable experience, but few points and St. Pat's was white-washed 17-0.

Then the Irish headed for Lennoxville and a joust with Bishops College. Travel weary, St. Pat's held a tie at the end of the third quarter but faded in the fourth to lose 21-13.

Against MacDonald College, with a Kealey to Costello pass for a point after touchdown late in the game, the Irish salvaged a 13-13 tie.

The final game against C.M.R. was a complete rout as St. Pat's ran up a lopsided 31-0 shutout and thus insured themselves of second place, their highest standing to date.

Student Union

John Quinn

Sitting down to write an article on your Student Union presents many difficulties. For there are so many things which can be said about the aims and methods of a union, so many projects which have been tried, some realized, some not, that emphasizing one thing while leaving another out would be an easy mistake to make.

In order to avoid this I would like to speak of the Student Union of 1956-57 just as though I were having a heart-to-heart talk with every individual student at St. Patrick's, and to tell you in a personal way my honest views on this year's union.

The Student Union's main aim was to interest each student in one or more activities, thereby giving to him or her a broader, fuller life which is so necessary in a college education, and which is not always gained by books alone. The union has strived to do this by allotting more money to the various committees so that they, in turn, could expand and increase their activities. We also lent our support and co-operated with the committee chairmen in every possible way.

As well as maintaining institutions which had been introduced at the college prior to this year, we have undertaken several new ones. We did this for the benefit and enjoyment of every student. Our efforts have found realization in our weekly paper, "Who's Where Book," an employment service, students' lounge, new canteen equipment, and more support for dramatics and debating. In order to aid the executives of future years, each member this year was requested to keep a record book wherein every action done in carrying out a special office was written down. We hope that this will guide and aid the future executive member in the fulfillment of his particular duty, and also help the Union as a governing body to function more smoothly.

College spirit was not only emphasized inside our four walls, but also beyond the halls of St. Patrick's. By our association with the National Federation of Canadian University Students we have furthered public relations with other colleges and have given our own views on various problems and projects.

Each member of this year's Union, and most especially the immediate executive, endeavoured to live up to the trust that you placed in our hands at the last election. We can certainly say that we enjoyed working with each other and for you. Furthermore, we know that the next executive can look forward to the same unfailing support which we received during our term of office.

The Tiezzi Award

Maragret Clairmont

To be awarded the coveted Silvio Tiezzi trophy is one of the greatest honours that can be bestowed on an S.P.C. student. Silvio, one of the College's most exemplary students lost his life in a fatal collision during the summer of his graduating year. To perpetuate his memory, a fund in aid of a scholarship and trophy was founded by the Student Union. The trophy was to be awarded to the student who best paralleled Silvio in scholastic achievement and other student activities—and the scholarship to the person obtaining highest standing in his Junior year.

Little need be said in introducing last year's winner of this coveted trophy, since Patrick Fahey has had a meritorious record throughout all his high school and college years. Pat was born in Ottawa in 1935 and after graduating from St. Malachy's School, he entered S.P.C. High School, winning medals for four years consecutively. He maintained his scholastic record in college, winning prizes in Economics and Religion, and crowning his achievements with the Governor-General's Medal, upon graduating in Commerce. In addition Pat was awarded several scholarships, including the St. Patrick's College Regional and the Canadian Legion B.E.S.L. Scholarship. Pat also excelled in sports and was active in various student activities.

The achievements of the winner of the Tiezzi Scholarship are no less meritorious. Marilyn Clay was born in St. John, New Brunswick, February 12, 1937. She attended St. Malachy's School, and after graduating from Immaculata, entered St. Pat's College as a Freshman. Marilyn received the Rector's Scholarship that year and the prize for science. Marilyn has also won medals for sophomore and junior years and prizes in chemistry, physics and mathematics.

We wish both Pat and Marilyn as many successes in the future as they have obtained in the past.

Spiritual

In the 1955-1956 Religious Survey conducted by the Spiritual Committee, 56% of the students stated that the spiritual program in this college was adequate and 44% stated that it was inadequate. None thought it was excessive. What, then, is the Spiritual Committee doing? What should it do? What should it not do? The Committee is in charge of religious functions held for the Student Union. The annual Retreat, the Annual Communion Breakfast, the daily recitation of the Angelus and Masses for special occasions are all part of its activity. Should it do more? Those who stated that the spiritual program was inadequate gave various suggestions, such as, the institution of weekly devotions in the College Chapel or the establishment of a religious organization within the student body. Such undertakings would be, in fact, outside of the Committee's scope. The Spiritual Committee in a Catholic college should not be responsible for the students' religious life but it should concern itself only with its part in the Student Union. The Committee does not serve as a minor clergy nor does it offer a substitute for parish life. Students here are receiving a Catholic education and it is up to them to reap its benefits.

Members of the Spiritual Committee this year were: Anne Vanasse, Vida Kubilius, Glen Kealey, Robert Latour, Gerald Murphy, and Italo Tiezzi.

It is the desire of the Committee that the students of St. Patrick's College will aim to sanctify their education to the service of religion. "Religio alit artes."

Debating

This year the College was host university for the N.F.C.U.S. Debating Association Finals. This brought to Ottawa the winners of the four debating leagues in Canada—the Western University Debating League, the I.U.D.L., the Villeneuve League (French-speaking) and the Maritime Debating League. Although this was a large undertaking for a college as small as St. Pat's, we felt that the name which S.P.C. has built up in debating circles was further enhanced by this endeavour.

With a strong nucleus of last year's debaters and some eager new-blood, debating continued strong at St. Pat's this year. In the preliminary fall debates the newcomers, teaming-up with the veterans, provided lively debates which were enjoyed by many of the students.

January brought on the Inter-University Debating League competition. The topic for this year was: Resolved that this house approves of the adop- tion of a national health scheme in Canada. The home team of Gertrude Nolan and Ray McMahon upheld the affirmative in stellar fashion, while the negative team of Bob Bambrick and John Dourley enhanced St. Pat's good name on the road. The first debates held simultaneously against Ottawa U. saw both S.P.C. teams get split decisions. In the second round against R.M.C. John and Bob won a unanimous decision from the Cadets at Kingston, while Gert and Ray defeated the visiting soldiers by a split decision; S.P.C. won the round five judges to one.

As this article is being written, our teams are preparing for the I.U.D.L. semi-finals against Bishops University from Lennoxville.

The success enjoyed this year is in large part due to the efforts of Fr. Cormican, whose counsel has frequently been sought by this year's chairman, and also to the aid of past chairman, R. J. Hurley.

This year our debaters won the coveted I.U.D.L. Championship defeating Toronto's Osgoode Hall in the finals.

Editorial

Looking back over the many hours of planning, of worrying over designs, expenses and meeting deadlines, and of gathering the material incorporated in this, the eighth edition of The Best Years, it is with a sigh of relief and with great edification and pleasure that we present to you, the students of St. Patrick's College, the result of our efforts.

The purpose of this volume is not only to provide nostalgic enjoyment and reminiscences for future years, but also to present tangible evidence of student interest in the various non-academic activities of the College. This could not have been accomplished without the enthusiastic aid of many people.

On the editorial staff, Bernard McNamee deserves a large vote of thanks for his cooperation with the editor in preparing the layouts for this edition. His work extended far beyond the call of duty and his efforts are sincerely appreciated. As copy editor, Bob Bambrick also deserves much thanks for his work in that department, and special appreciation is due to Glen Kealey, Joe Hattie, Peter Berndt, and John O'Manique who spent much of their time obtaining the pictures necessary for this publication. John, as photographic editor, was invaluable to us. Tom Walsh and Bill Gallagher, who handled most of the advertising, deserve great thanks for their capable handling of our finances, and the contributions of Ed Kelly, Harold Green and Peter Berndt, who headed the art department, add greatly to the appearance of this edition. To all those who provided the necessary written material, we are extremely grateful. The entire staff owes much to Fr. Mitchell for his constant encouragement and advice, and to Fr. Kelly and to Sen. Connolly for their enjoyable and enlightening messages. Finally, we wish to thank the faculty and students for their complete cooperation with us at all times.

As you leaf through the pages of this yearbook we hope that you will recall some of the pleasant elements which pervade college life, for then our work was not in vain.

What Every Young College Girl Should Know

by Carolyn L. McDonald

SCENE: High School Graduation

QUESTION: And what does this "sweet girl graduate" plan to do?

ANSWER: Attend College!

QUESTION: Why?

College! What a magic word! There are three types of co-eds in college. To some it's positively a whirl of parties, plays, Glee Clubs, Student Union, cutting classes, bull sessions, dates and a multitude of other pleasantries that every sweet young thing with a lively imagination can picture in her crystal ball.

To others it is a stepping-stone to a career, a vocation, an aim in life which is gained after a calculated amount of time and effort (no more is ever done than required) on every subject one has to take, but no more. They learn what is required for their career in life, and have the knowledge to maintain it.

To still others it is a challenge: a challenge to learn all possible besides all necessary so that whatever position life holds for them, they may face it prepared.

Every young girl in college should know these three types of co-eds, and every young girl should seek to find the best in each. One must endeavour to be liberally educated, it is said, but not too liberally; one should be practical, but not too practical; studious but not too studious. This is indeed a puzzling problem to a young girl entering college. These three types can be generally termed as: frivolous, practical, and studious. Which should the co-ed be? Be a combination, and learn first and foremost how to live. That's what we should learn from college. That's what education should teach us.

Every young girl should know that doing a little bit of everything isn't really the important thing. A Jack-of-all-trades is master of none. Whatever course you choose, have an aim in mind, have the interest to learn all required, and more not required; have the desire to do a few activities well, not all half-heartedly, and above all enjoy yourself, but only to the degree that these former goals are not interfered with. If the young college girl can accomplish this ideal situation, she will certainly have attained something worthwhile from her college days, but if extremes to one side or the other hold sway, college will lose its magic.

It is especially important for girls to know what college should mean to them, if only to answer the criticisms of those outside who say "What good is college to a girl? Her only vocation is marriage." These onlookers (we shall term them) think of women as purely economic factors, and as necessary beings. They completely ignore the essential importance and vital significance of these "sweet co-eds." To educate a nation, educate its women, because through them the new generation will be educated. Hence there is a definite responsibility for a girl when she enters college. She can avoid it, forget it, fear it, treat it as an object in the concrete, or think of it as a substance in the abstract, but she cannot get away from it, or obliterate it. Education provides a duty as well as an opportunity for girls who embrace it.

To fulfill a duty, sacrifices must be made; miss that party, spend that extra hour in the library, attend that recommended lecture. It is only after that responsibility has been met, that one can be truly called educated. Every young college girl should meet that responsibility, and following her graduation, if she acts according to what she has learned, college will not have lost, and will never lose any of its magic.

Securing a Position

by Glen Kealey

One college graduate is hired for a particular career opening; another is not. Why? Innate ability and educational qualifications are not the only deciding factors. Mistakes in the three stages of securing a position—the application, the interview and the probation are common reasons.

Most students fail in the first stage—applying for a job. Frequently they apply for positions not suited to their experience or ability. To avoid these, discuss your assets and shortcomings with a friend. Survey the field of your interest and consider specific job prospects at least six months before graduating. It is better to be too early than too late.

In comparing companies, remember that a healthy promotion plan is more important than a high initial salary, but beware of those firms that "start everyone at the very bottom and let 'em work up," unless you are applying for a position as an office boy. You must have the necessary qualifications for a post. If you haven't, do not waste your time applying.

Do not wait for a company which interests you to advertise a career opportunity. Write an application letter to the company. The purpose of such a letter is not to obtain a job (personnel offices do not hire students by mail), but to get an interview. Since the majority of application letters are ineffective, you have a very good chance of getting an interview if you write a good one.

Your application letter should be two pages in length. The first should contain three or four paragraphs in which you apply for a specific position, state concisely your chief assets and request an interview. Page two should be an autobiographical sketch containing your name, phone number, address, education, business experience, personal details and three references. Relatives should not be used for references. Your letter must be detailed—concise and neat. Avoid undue humility or boundless conceit. If your grades were good, specify them; if they weren't good, it is best to maintain a golden silence. Include in your autobiography courses of special interest to your prospective employer, elective offices and membership in organizations, summer work and sports and hobbies. Any activity which gave you leadership training should definitely be included. Do not state an expected salary even if asked to do so or you are likely to be underbid. Explain that you would prefer to discuss your salary at an interview.

If you are successful in obtaining an interview, prepare. Study the prospective company, talk to its employees and competitors and read its annual report. Whether you like it or not, people judge by first appearances. For your interview, be immaculate. After entering your interviewer's office, shake hands and remain standing until asked to sit down. Be confident but not cocky. Do not tell your prospective boss everything you know or he will discover your ignorance too soon. Answer all questions concisely; if you do not know an answer, admit it frankly.

The day after the interview, drop your prospective employer a note thanking him for the courtesy of an interview, and expressing the hope that your qualifications will receive favourable consideration. Such a note may seem superfluous—most of those interviewed will not bother to send one, but then, most of those interviewed will not be hired.

If you are hired, prepare. You will likely be placed on probation for a few months. As a "green" college graduate, you can expect some resentment from your fellow worker, who may see you as a rival to their promotion. To win the respect of your co-workers during this period, be friendly, but not too familiar; ask advice frequently, give none. Your work at first may be tedious, but be patient and apply yourself, keep asking questions and you will determine your own advancement.

Initiation

by Wayne Spooner

On Wed. Oct. 4th, in keeping with tradition the annual "Initiation Week" officially opened. On that fateful morn the Frosh at 9 A.M. assembled for inspection in the canteen and to render a song or two for the benefit of superior Seniors. That afternoon at 0100 they reluctantly lined up for the parade to Confederation Square. A motorcycle escort, the High School band, and a convertible carrying the President, Vice-President, and the Frosh Queen led the motley crew down Elgin St. A slight demonstration of stubbornness broke out at the corner of Elgin and Laurier in the form of a sit-down strike. However, the Seniors proved they were not to be bargained with, and a few well-aimed smoke bombs broke up this revolt.

At Confederation Square the then Mayor of Ottawa, Dr. Charlotte Whitton, crowned the Frosh Queen, Miss Anne More, and said a few words to the students.

The "Frosh" then were separated into groups and proceeded to various parts of the city where their humiliating tasks were set before them.

On Thursday afternoon "Court" was held in the college gym. Here the delinquent Frosh were charged, tried and justly punished according to the severity of their crimes. After the usual procedures of frosh inspection etc., a corn roast was held Friday night on the campus. The initiation festivities ended on Saturday night with a dance held in the school gym.

Is initiation a detrimental or a beneficial element in college life? The frosh themselves supplied the answer. They urged that it was great fun for both themselves and the seniors, and admitted that college life would be incomplete without an initiation.

Lowest Of The Low

C.F.C.C.S.

Some time ago there was an organization introduced into the Student Union of St. Patrick's College called C.F.C.C.S. I would like to point out Article 4 of the C.F.C.C.S. Constitution. It states, "The purpose of the Federation is to aid in the integral formation of the Catholic student by stimulating spiritual, intellectual, social and cultural endeavour." We have frequently heard the argument that C.F.C.C.S. is not doing anything constructive of material value by which we, the members, can benefit. We would like to point out to those who profess this argument that the Student Union entered this Federation not for material gains, but to support Article 4 of the Constitution.

We already have an organization which helps students in a material way. We are not competitors.

C.F.C.C.S. activities at St. Pat's this year were poorly supported, with a total of eleven meetings held and an average attendance of one or less. A campaign was inaugurated to encourage interest in C.F.C.C.S. but met with little success. A further attempt was made to promote the national project Higher Education, but what can a committee do without members?

In conclusion may it be realized that you, the students of St. Patrick's College are Catholic Students, and as such should support C.F.C.C.S.

N.F.C.U.S.

Robert McNamee
Chairman

St. Pat's second active year in N.F.C.U.S. progressed very satisfactorily with the usual good support of The Student Union and the student body. This year St. Patrick's College was officially recognized at the 20th National Student Conference Seminar held at Sir George Williams College in Montreal, October 8th to 13th, and joined with other universities and colleges across Canada to discuss the need and problems of Canadian University students.

This year St. Pat's entered the National Photography Contest and submitted entries in the Short Story Contest and the Corpuscle Cup competitions. In addition, St. Pat's generously offered assistance to Hungarian relief. A N.F.C.U.S. life insurance plan was introduced on the campus for the benefit of the student and a scheme to raise the amount taxable from $1,000.00 to $2,000.00 on student summer employment is in progress.

Our own Debating Society has taken charge of the National Debating finals sponsored by N.F.C.U.S. and although University exchange weekends were not deemed feasible this year, a report was submitted for future reference.

N.F.C.U.S. has become a recognized activity on the St. Pat's campus, as a federation worthy of its aims: the promotion of greater co-operation and correlation among Canadian Universities and the betterment of mutual understanding among students at home and abroad.

Glee Club

By Gerry Belisle

The time: 1:15!

The day: Some Friday afternoon!

The place: Room 111!

Yes, this is where and when the Glee Club meets.

This is your chairman, reporting from room 111. Father McDonald has just entered the room. We are almost ready to start the practice—But oh! Hold everything; The door opens, and in walks Par Kelly, our newest recruit to the club. Now we are about to begin.

Fr. McDonald goes to the blackboard and writes the following, "Pauper sum ego" . . . O. K. Marge, strike up a chord in "G" please.

The group is quickly divided into three groups. The first starting with, "Pauper sum . . .", followed by the second group who at a given signal starts with "Pauper sum . . ." and finally the third group swings into action also with "Pauper sum . . ."

Harmony at its best!

Wait, Mr. Reader, don't turn the page to another column, since you may not be a Latin scholar!

Gerald Belisle
Chairman

I will set your mind at ease "tout de suite." This was only a warming up exercise which we sing at the opening of every session.

Father then says, "Now that the formalities are over, let's try, 'Night and Day.' Marge, the introduction please."

The introduction starts, then the mighty basses commence with the first few bars, at the end of which the romantic tenors join in. The harmony is climaxed and completed with the angelic strains of the alto and soprano sections respectively.

We then challenge such wonderful selections as—"Dancing In The Dark," "Just One Of Those Things," and "Birth Of The Blues."

This is the revised Glee Club of the College, your Glee Club. This club is only as good as the amount of effort and time which you, the students, put into it. Its success lies entirely in your hands. Many new ideas are being carried out to make the club more enjoyable and appealing to the students. Next year, a bigger and even better club!

Father leads us in prayer, after which the group disperses into the halls of S.P.C.

Gosh! its time for me to go.

The '56-'57 social season at St. Patrick's College opened on October 3, with the Initiation Dance which concluded the zany proceedings. Special guests at this dance were the R.M.C. football team which had gone down to defeat at the hands of the Irish in the afternoon. At the dance, however, all rivalry was forgotten, and a good time was had by all.

The next event was held on November 10. This was the football dance and the highlight of the evening was the drawing for two tickets to the Grey Cup game won by Royden Kealey. In keeping with the motif of the dance, the gym was decorated as a football field with the coach's table on the 55 yard line. After the drawing for the tickets Royden Kealey and Tom Ray, co-captains of the team, presented Coach Lynch with a gift of appreciation from the players. About 100 couples enjoyed an evening of dancing to the music of Scotty Morrison.

On December 21st, the students of St. Pat's began their Christmas holidays with a semi-formal dance, the Sno Ball, which was held at the Hull Armouries, with Val Prymak's orchestra in attendance. Special guests included members of the faculty with their wives and members of the alumni. For the occasion a large Christmas tree decorated the hall, and the girls were presented with corsages of mistletoe as they entered.

Next on the list was the third annual Nuclear Spin on January 19th. As in the past years, this dance was sponsored by the science students, who put a lot of work into preparing it, and to whom much credit is due for a very successful evening.

With the Valentine Dance on Feb. 16th, and the St. Patrick's Day Dinner Dance on March 15th, another social season came to an end.

Alumni Association

St. Patrick's College Alumni Association came into existence at the end of January 1948. It is rapidly growing into a vigorous organization and sponsors a number of activities throughout the year. Several cocktail parties are held, the most auspicious being the Christmas season party, but the principal social event of the Association is the annual Graduation Dance which was held last year at the Rivermead Golf Club. Three years ago a building fund was set up by the Alumni and at present contains approximately 3,500.00. Plans have also been made to establish an Association Board of Governors which would be composed of past-presidents of the last four years and the present Alumni Association president. This Board will impart continuity to the Association's leadership and, while acting in an advisory capacity only, will be charged with the responsibility for making statements on policy to the Alumni itself.

Further plans call for the establishment of an Alumni-Undergraduate Committee which would provide that members of the Alumni (doctors, lawyers, civil servants etc.) would aid the undergraduate in his choice of a professional career by outlining the entrance requirements and advantages of the various professions. Plans were also made to expand the scope of the Association by setting up committees for College Development, Building Fund Drive and entertainment.

This year's executive was: president—Jim J. McKennirey ('48), vice-president—Benjamin Steinberg ('34), secretary—Miss Elaine Leblanc ('55), treasurer—Bernie Benoit ('51), past-president—Dr. Leitch ('35).
